but the sequel will prove that such a conclusion would be erratic. Mr Grandpre, having served the colony in various capacities for about eighteen years, has now to retire owing to ill health. When he joined the service, he was a very sprightly young man-he is now a white headed old man, with his health broken, and suffering from a disease of the heart--Now we will show how the government behaved to him. We cannot vouch for the precise accuracy of what we are about to state. because we obtain our information from second and to some extent from third hands We have avoided all reference to Mr. Grandpre, simply because we fancied that his case might be prejudiced if he could be traced to Road & Zetland Stroet, Bast of the Clock Tower, baving given us the smallest information. Well, Mr. Grandpre being condemned, that is to say, being declared unfit for service, he applied for permission to ratice on such pension as he might be entitled to. This request being accompanied by proper certificates, could not be refused flatly, but Governor Robinson declined to comply with it, unti Mr. Grandpre's account had been squared. In the meantime however. Governor R. ordered Mr. Grandpre's salary to be stopped, so that no stone might be left unturned to kill an applicant for a pension who was suffering badly from palpitation of the heart. Mr Grandpre placed his books in other hands. and urged his application for a pension : this was met by the outragious pretext that he was upwards of $1000 short in his contributions to the extinct superannuation fund. Mr. Grandpre having never had his salary raised, had lived up to his means and is a poor man. He had not $1,000, but a certain. party whose residence is not very far from D'Agullar St. managed that. That paid dovernor Robinson still refused both pension and salary until Mr. Granapre's accounts were audited. That being done, Mr. Grandpre applied for his salary up to the time of the audit; but that also Governor Robinson
